The image shows a single, narrow strip of a palm-leaf manuscript. The leaf is dark brown and has a rough, irregular texture. It is inscribed with three lines of text in a South Indian script, likely Grantha or Tamil. The characters are finely etched into the surface of the leaf. A small, circular hole is visible near the center of the strip, which is a traditional feature for threading a cord to bind multiple leaves together. The text is arranged in three horizontal lines, with the first line at the top, the second in the middle, and the third at the bottom. The script is highly stylized and cursive.

Handwritten text in Devanagari script on a palm leaf manuscript. The text is arranged in approximately 10 horizontal lines. The script is cursive and includes various characters, including vowels and consonants, as well as punctuation marks like dots and horizontal lines. There are two circular holes visible on the leaf, likely for binding or ventilation. The leaf is aged and shows signs of wear, with some discoloration and irregular edges.
